Alora Mood follows emerging trends in interior design, fashion, and art to match the mood of your home. Check out our five design moods to best match the style you love most. Find your mood throughout the catalog by matching these colors to the edge of each page.

Parisian Mood

Parisian Modern is a fresh take on Hollywood Regency and Glam. Taking cues from fashion, regality is in. Vintage meets modern in a new way that takes hints from Federalist to Rococo. This style usually includes pops of muted rich tones with touches of fun fabrics.

Boho Mood

The new Bohemian style has been a top trend that continues to evolve as it grows. Beachy natural shapes are common in non-traditional statement lighting marked with this style. Japandi, the mix of Japanese naturalism and Scandinavian design is another facet that Bohemian style is evolving.

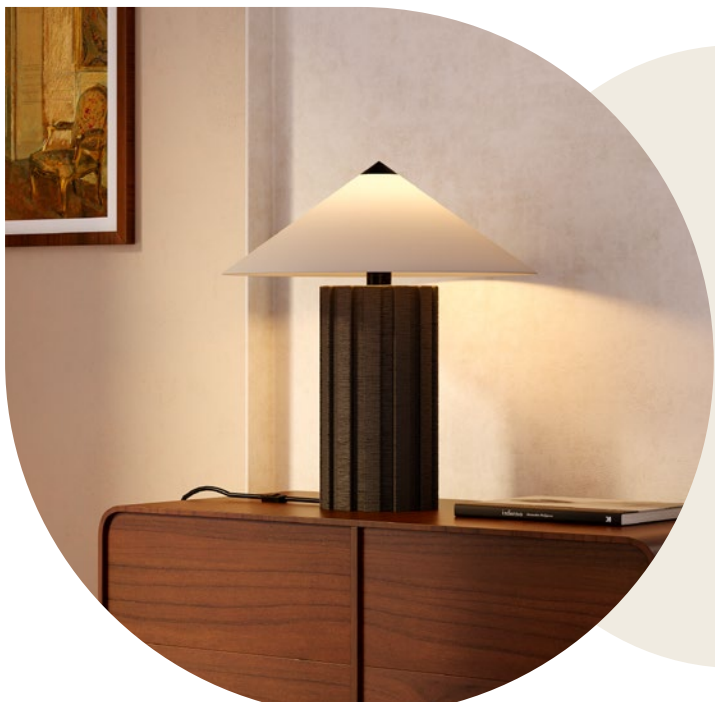

Eclectic Mood

Eclectic style has become a curated and refined art that many find sparks joy. Designs in this artful style range from moody to bright and fun. Elements typically associated with Eclectic lighting includes whimsical shapes and compositions of glass and metal dancing in harmony.

Cottage Mood

Modern Cottage is an evolution of the modern farmhouse aesthetic that blends cozy, traditional silhouettes found in the English countryside with minimalist forms that can thrive in any space. Warm, earthy tones, vintage-inspired textures and shapes, and welcoming glows sum up the Modern Cottage mood perfectly.

Japandi Mood

Japandi is the artful mixing of Japanese naturalism with Scandinavian design sensibility. Minimalist forms take new shape with nature-inspired details to make this style one-of-a-kind. The philosophy of wabi-sabi can be found in this style, embracing the raw beauty of nature in every detail.

Enhance Your Mood:

A Bulb Guide

Base Level

To choose the right bulb, you have to start with the base size. There are three common base sizes: Candelabra (E12), Intermediate (E17), and Medium (E26) base. Keep these sizes in mind when purchasing the right bulb.

What's Your Wattage?

It is important to choose the right wattage when it comes to choosing a bulb. That will also determine the lumen output of your fixture. Be sure to choose a bulb with the matching wattage to the specifications found in this catalog.

Brightness in Lumens	 Standard	 Halogen	 CFL	 LED
220+ 	25W	18W	6W	4W
400+ 	40W	28W	9W	6W
700+ 	60W	42W	12W	10W
900+ 	75W	53W	15W	13W
1300+ 	100W	70W	20W	18W

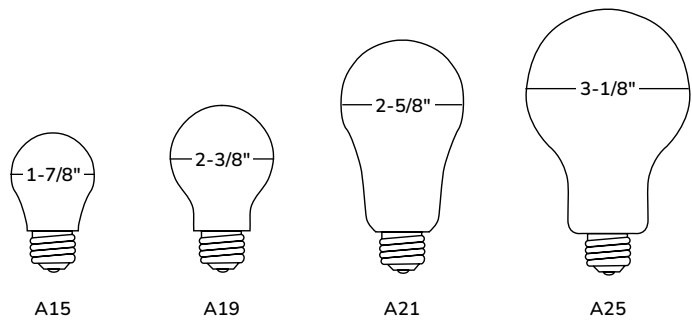

Shape & Style

Each base has several sizes and styles that can work for each fixture. You can change the mood of a fixture completely by changing the size and shape of bulb inside. You can also choose styles of glass at this level. Opal, Clear, Edison, and even Chromatic and Metallic bulbs exist! Get as creative as you want with your styles. Here are a few suggestions when choosing a shape and style:

The A Shape

Standard/arbitrary (A) bulbs are the most widely used and thought of when it comes to household lighting. These bulbs work well for a variety of applications, such as ceiling lights, lamps, vanity lights, kitchen lights, closet lights, porch light fixtures, and so many more. Usually, A Bulbs are for Medium-based socket types.

Numbers in each code refer to the bulb's diameter in eighths of an inch.

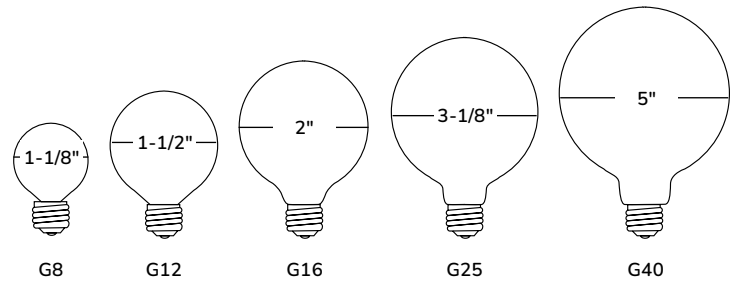

G Shape

Globe (G) bulbs have a full, round shape and are available in various sizes. They can be used for many applications throughout the home, such as foyer lights, kitchen lights, chandeliers, and ornamental fixtures.

Depending on the bulb, numbers in each code can refer to the bulb's diameter in eighths of an inch or in millimeters.

G bulbs are usually for Medium-based socket types but can be for Candelabra-based socket types as well.

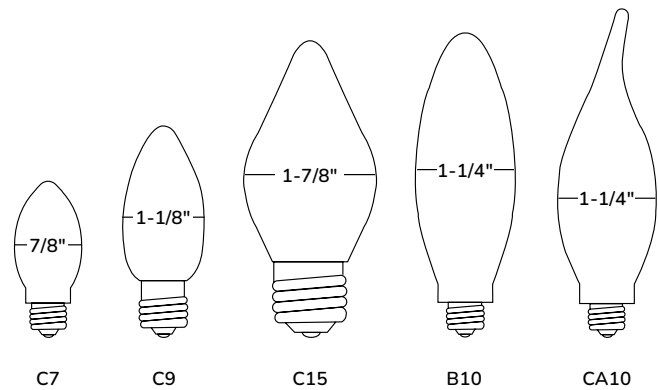

B and C Shapes

All of the bulbs in these groups resemble the shape of a candle flame and are often referred to as candle bulbs.

Conical (C) bulbs are shaped like a cone. Conical angular (CA) bulbs are shaped like a cone but have a bent tip. Blunt-tip (B) bulbs are very similar to C-type bulbs but have more of a torpedo or bullet shape. These bulbs can be used in chandeliers, wall sconces, and pendant lights. B and C bulbs are usually for Candelabra-based socket types but can be for Medium-based socket types as well.

Numbers in each code refer to the bulb's diameter in eighths of an inch.

T Shape

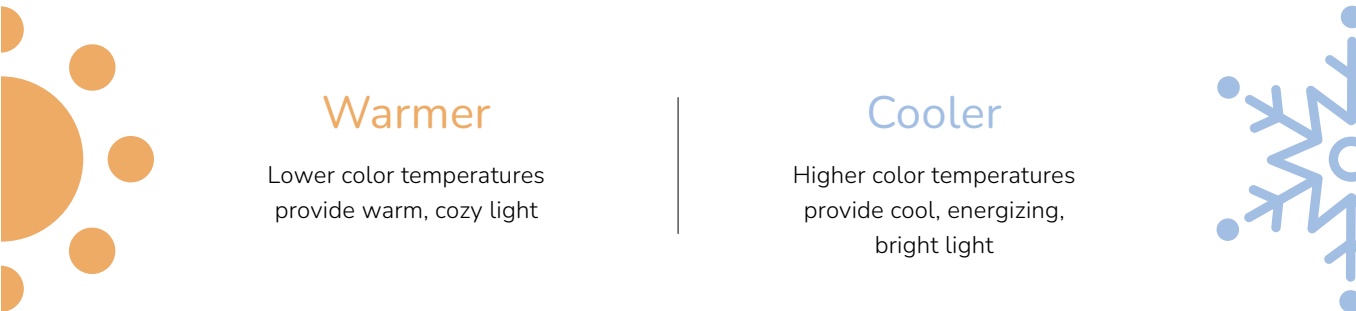

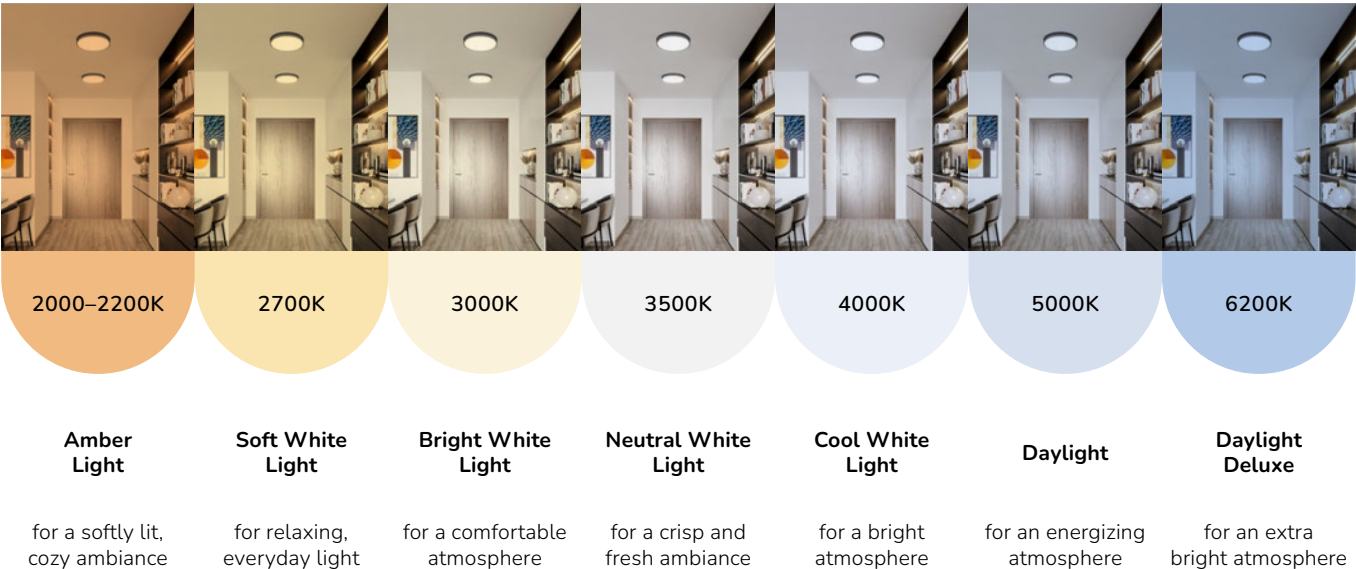

Tubular (T) bulbs come in a variety of lengths and widths. Depending on their size, these bulbs can be used in applications ranging from chandeliers, wall sconces, and pendant lights. T bulbs are used in a combination of both Medium-based and Candelabra-socket types.

Numbers in each code refer to the bulb's diameter in eighths of an inch.

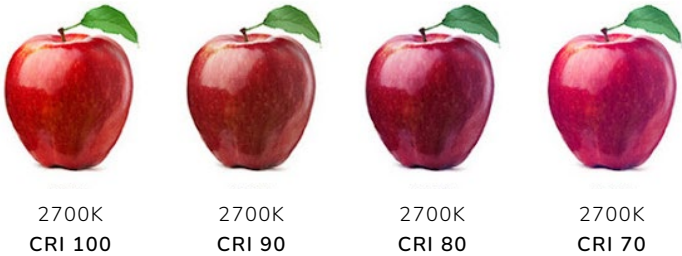

Color Temperature

When selecting a bulb, consider the usage of your interior space. For functional rooms where illumination is important for carrying out tasks, like a kitchen or bathroom, consider a higher kelvin light source, such as 2700K. For rooms with multiple light sources, or where mood is important, choose a lower kelvin bulb, such as 2200K, to achieve warmth and atmosphere.

CRI

CRI is important when considering the accuracy of the light emitted. For interior spaces where true color is needed, such as bathrooms and bedrooms, make sure you choose a bulb with a high CRI. Anything lower than 80 will slightly distort wall colors or furniture.
